Good afternoon, folks.

The thing with your FERPA argument is that every single correspondent I am asking you to search for here is already a member of the public with respect to your organization. If you discussed anything exempt with e.g. CCSA you're required by law to release it to me. I assume you're not sharing your students' private info with any of the orgs on my list. So your claims about review are pretty implausible.

Please reconsider your theory that the law permits you to print these emails on paper. It's also pretty rich that you're complaining about the money you'll have to spend to print them given that if your goal weren't to obstruct access you could produce them for free electronically.
